“ I remember when I lost my mom and couldn't stand to be at home because I knew she wouldn't be there. Everything reminded me of her. So, I spent a lot of time at Dennis and Cheryl's house. I saw Corky and Dorothy there several times. They were always so caring and concerned about how I was doing. It meant so much to me. I remember doing dishes in the kitchen with Dorothy and having a conversation with her like I would have had with my mom. Both Dorothy and Corky invited me to visit them anytime. It is my turn to be there for her family if they need me for anything at all. You will be missed. This is a line from a poem I wrote for my mom in second grade. Thousands of birds in the clear blue sky, but only one mother.
